

Leicestershire Music Hub Charging & Remission Policy

V.2 Nov 2024

Charging Policy

Leicestershire Music is a not-for-profit organisation and the income that it generates through trading, grants or other income sources is ringfenced for the delivery of music education within Leicester and Leicestershire. The more income that LM can generate means that there is more funding available to deliver its aims and objectives.

Leicestershire Music operates 3 different approaches to charging depending on the aims and objectives of the activities being delivered:

- Delivery unit costs covered by fees
- Delivery unit cost subsidised
- Delivery unit cost not covered - Provision offered for Free

When deciding upon the fees to charge the following key considerations are made:

- How important is delivering the activity to meeting aims and objectives?
- Who is the end user and is cost / finance a potential barrier to participation?
- How engaged is the end user - is this a loss-leader activity to encourage future participation?
- What is the elasticity of demand? What is the ceiling cost for the end user?
- What are competitors charging?

Depending on the answer to these considerations one of the above three charging approaches will be used.

Provision is generally only offered for free as a loss leader and where LM are looking to engage a previously unengaged end user with the services it has to offer to make them aware of the high quality of LM's services and products. The aim of using this approach is therefore to introduce the end user to LM with a view to them either buying into a range of alternative services in future, (e.g., schools) or, to continue to buy into the same service for longer (e.g. free trial with a view to pay in future).

Where there is high strategic importance to encourage maximum participation, to secure high engagement rates, then the charging model selected is likely to be one of subsidy. i.e. part of the unit costs of delivery are recovered through the fees charged. For example, the cost of delivering the Whole Class Instrumental Teaching programme to schools is subsidised as the school budgets would likely be prohibitive to paying the true cost of delivery, which would mean that many more children and young people would miss out on this opportunity to learn to play an instrument through this programme.

Full recovery of the unit cost of delivery is used where there is more elasticity of demand and where the fees are competitive with other providers in the marketplace. LM understand that this may create some barriers to participation, particularly where the delivery relationship is directly with parents and carers of children and young people. Therefore, these activities are eligible for fee remission in line with the remission policy.
